

TWO SEASCOUTS HAVE A THRILLING EXPERIENCE; ESCAPE FROM BURNING BOAT IN DELAWARE; RESCUED BY ELKS

Martin VanBeveren, 21, and Joseph McLean, 19, Unable To Conquer Blaze on Seascout Ship "Elks" — Boat Later Towed to Shore — Burns To The Water's Edge

Two Bristol Seascouts, members of the Seascout Ship "Elks," had a thrilling experience last night when the "Elks" caught fire in mid-river and both youths had to jump overboard and swim 200 yards or more to other boats from which they were rescued by members of the lodge which sponsors the Scoutship. The ship was destroyed.

The Seascouts are:

Martin VanBeveren, 21, 1221 Pond street; and Joseph McLean, 19, Bath Road. Both went to their regular employment today, apparently none the worse for their experience.

VanBeveren and McLean went out in the ship "Elks" at about seven o'clock last night and worked for nearly three hours on the ship, which was put into commission for the Summer some time ago. There was still some work to be done on the ship and the two Seascouts spent the evening in fixing the gas line and doing some wiring. Then the boat was given a test run and performed fairly satisfactorily.

The ship is 26 feet in length and was owned by the Bristol Seascouts and was formerly a government craft but was obtained by the Seascouts about two years ago. It had a Peerless engine, and was well equipped. It was a cabin cruiser.

After the test run the ship was idling in the middle of the Delaware river about in mid-stream, between Mulberry and Market streets. McLean was at the engine and Van Beveren at the wheel.

McLean called to Van Beveren and asked if he was ready to go.

"Step on it," was Van Beveren's answer.

Then there was an explosion.

Van Beveren called to McLean and asked him if he was O. K.

"Yes," was the answer.

McLean threw sand onto the burning motor and Van Beveren asked him if he wanted the fire extinguisher.

By this time the cabin was enveloped in flames and both youths realized they were confronted with a serious situation.

Van Beveren called to his pal in the cabin and said "There's five gallons of gas back here in a can!"

"Throw it over," said McLean. The gas was tossed into the river.

Both Seascouts leaped into the river fully clothed. Van Beveren grabbed a life jacket. McLean did not. After McLean got overboard he went back to the burning ship and got a life jacket as he did not know how long he would be in the water.

Van Beveren swam to the boat of Clarence W. Winter and McLean swam to the boat of J. S. Fine.

Members of the Bristol Lodge of Elks saw the burning craft and two crews put out in boats for the rescue. It was about 9:30 and the rescuers rowed through the darkness searching for the Seascouts. The boat manned by Charles Rathke and John Smoyer, 3rd, pulled Van Beveren into their boat, while John Black, John Hess and Frank Voit got McLean as he clung to the side of the Fine boat.

Both scouts were numbed by the cold and were taken to the Elks' Home and given hot coffee. They were then taken to their respective homes.

The ship was burned to the water's edge. The burning craft drifted to the middle of the stream. It was towed ashore and Bristol Consolidated Fire Department was called and fought the flames. The loss is estimated at about $2,000.

Kills Woman and Himself

Philadelphia, May 26—His love spurned by another man's wife, Carol Vanacoff, alias Vanning, 26, today shot and critically wounded the woman as she pleaded for mercy, and then killed himself, in West Philadelphia, police reported.

The woman, Mrs. Anna Murdock, 28, was shot through the neck in the rear of her home, a short time after her husband, an employee of a contracting firm, had left for work.

Believing her dead, Vanning rushed to the street and drove off in a borrowed car. A few blocks away he stopped in front of his home and shot himself through the head, detectives said. He was employed as an attendant at a center city parking lot.

Following a preliminary investigation, detectives expressed the theory that Mrs. Murdock, mother of two children, was shot because she rejected Vanning's attentions.

Neighbors told police, they said, that Vanning forced his way into Mrs. Murdock's home and chased the screaming woman through the house, finally cornering her in a rear yard. And as she fell to her knees and pleaded with him to spare her, he placed the pistol to her neck and pulled the trigger, detectives said, while horrified neighbors watched from their windows.

Named Foreign Minister

Tokyo, May 26—In a round-about move to curb army control of Japan by putting a liberal non-militarist at the head of the government, General Kasuhide Ugaki, foe of Fascism and Jingoism, today was appointed foreign minister in a cabinet re-shuffle.

The foreign minister is only a stepping stone, it was believed, to enable General Ugaki eventually to succeed Prince Konye as premier.

As master of foreign affairs, General Ugaki replaces Koki Hirota and the new minister is expected to adopt a more placatory policy towards Europe and America. The cabinet charges, which are likely soon to extend to the foreign ministry, revealed the months struggle going on between civilians and army elements; and they also partially bared the country's plight over Japan's recent revise in China.

Hines Under Indictment

New York, May 26—James J. Hines, foremost Tammany leader, will plead today to an indictment charging him with being an undercover power behind the Dutch Schultz racket empire. The indictment, already prepared, and to be handed down by the Grand Jury within a few hours, links Hines with J. Robert "Dixie" Davis, disbarred lawyer for the Schultz mob, in control of the $100,000,000-a-year syndicate.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has indicated that at least 12 felony counts and one conspiracy count will be charged against the one-time black-smith, who is accused of influencing and intimidating judges and police officials and of hampering the process of the court as the "higher up" and "fixer" for Schultz and those who succeeded him after his murder.

Heilberg, the greenhouse owner, testified that the defendants entered his place at night and stole the flowers.

Simmons testified that "they must have been drunk the night they stole the flowers."

The damage suffered by Heilberg amounted to about $446, including $146 for the carnations and $300 for the damaged plants.

Mrs. Julia Simmons, mother of one of the defendants, testified she didn't know her son had served time in a Trenton workhouse.

Michael Cutler, of Phila., testified that he had been successful in raising enough money for the defendants to reimburse Mr. Heilberg for the damage done.

Attorney Eastburn informed the Court that he had $100 to turn over to Heilberg and that the balance must be paid before any minimum sentence expires.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The Horace Berk Memorial Hospital at Warrington, is reported to have been so successful in treating mental ailments that the board of trustees opened a campaign to provide a new 100-bed addition.

Four months ago the hospital started out with only 13 beds. Reports show 15 patients suffering from dementia praecox have been discharged and 10 of those were permanently cured. Dr. Samuel Cohen, medical supervisor, said.

The hospital, which treats patients unable to pay, give either the insulin or the new metrazol "shock" treatments. Of those discharged, three have improved sufficiently to live at home, and it is expected that, with continued use of insulin, they will show further recovery.

Spontaneous recovery from dementia praecox occurs only in a small percentage of cases, Dr. Cohen said.

Samuel Radbill, chairman of the board of trustees, pointed out, in advocating the new addition, that no other private institution treats patients free.

"We are advancing in a relatively neglected field of psychiatry," he said, "by getting the hopeful case and treating it early and intensively before hopeless deterioration sets in."

Fred Hartless Found Guilty of Drunken Driving Charge

HIS SECOND OFFENSE

DOYLESTOWN, May 26—Fred Hartless, of Croydon, was found guilty of driving while drunk, in a case tried before Judge Boyer. This being the defendant's second offense, the Court sentenced Hartless to pay a fine of $200 and costs or give security to do so within 10 days. Hartless was placed on probation for two years.

Charles W. Groover, of Morrisville, went on trial before a jury in Judge Boyer's court charged with assault and battery alleged to have been committed on Mrs. Ida McWalters, a neighbor.

The prosecutrix admitted upon cross-examination that "war had been brewing between the McWalters and Groovers for six years." Property lines and arguments of all sort have been "hatched over" for years both sides admitted.

Mrs. McWalters testified that Groover struck her on the arm with a shovel "making the imprint of the weapon on her arm, causing a rosy-red bruise."

Four "Mothers' Day carnation thieves" pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Calvin S. Boyer to stealing 2000 carnations and ruining a lot of plants at the Peter Hellberg greenhouse at Chalfont the day before Mothers' Day this year. They were "caught with the goods" as they were driving along the Limekiln pike. They were sentenced to prison.

The defendants, Peter Fox, Chester Geist, Louis Bartsch and Thomas Simmons, were represented by former District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown. The Commonwealth was represented by Assistant District Attorney Willard Curtin.

Several of the defendants have criminal records, it was proven in court. The defendants testified they never saw or heard about the Hellberg greenhouses before the night they stole the carnations.

Heilberg, the greenhouse owner, testified that the defendants entered his place at night and stole the flowers.

Simmons testified that "they must have been drunk the night they stole the flowers."

The damage suffered by Heilberg amounted to about $446, including $146 for the carnations and $300 for the damaged plants.

WHY THE COMMON COLD IS MORE FREQUENT IN THE WINTER MONTHS

"The only reason colds are more frequent in the winter is because we live indoors then, and hence breathe more foul air. This probably explains the prevalence of colds in the spring—people are particularly susceptible because they have been shut up indoors all winter."

The above quotation is taken from volume one of the Modern Health Library—"The Cause and Cure of Colds," a series now being distributed by The Courier to its readers. Prepared by two distinguished physicians, who are also husband and wife, this series offers valuable help to Courier readers in maintaining robust, vigorous health.

Members of the Joseph A. Schumacher Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, have completed plans for a proper observance of Memorial Day. The post will attend Divine service in the Church of Our Saviour here and then on Memorial Day will conduct services in the Bristol cemetery.

The Rev. Bensinger, speaker at the Bristol cemetery, enlisted in the World War while in his senior year at Lafayette College. He became a member of the ambulance corps and served with the French, driving an ambulance in the front lines until the close of the war.

At the close of the war he returned to America and finished his studies at Lafayette and also at Princeton. At the close of his educational career he became the pastor of the church at Dutch Neck, N. J.

The Rev. Bensinger has served as commander of the Princeton Post, No. 73, American Legion; and also as national commander of the United States Army Ambulance Service Association and is now national chaplain of this organization. THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Rule 32 Rescinded

Washington, May 25.

A CORRESPONDENT from South Carolina writes as follows: "When the donkey bites South Carolina (as it did when the Administration tried to jam through the anti-lynching bill and when it took to its bosom the Negroes of the North) that is not news. But when South Carolina bites the donkey, believe me, that IS News."

THE reference is to the action of the State convention on May 18, when "Rule 32" was rescinded. Rule 32 has been in effect in South Carolina—but in no other State—for a good many years. It pledges all persons voting in a Democratic primary to support the Democratic candidates in the national election.

If it had not been for the Pennsylvania and Oregon primaries, the rescinding of this rule would have attracted much wider attention. Actually, in some ways it was more nationally significant than either. It is not true as my correspondent suggests, that South Carolina, the most impregnable Democratic State in the country, bit the Democratic donkey, but if the loud outcries of the complete New Dealers in its convention meant anything, it is true that South Carolina did bite the Roosevelt Administration—in a quite unexpected place.

BY ITS vote—213 to 120—this party assemblage confirmed those who months ago pointed out that the abrogation of the two-thirds rule, forced by the President's friends in the 1935 national convention, followed by the calculated, ardent and successful Roosevelt-Farley-Guffey wooing of the Negro vote in the debatable States, soon or late was sure to arouse resentment in the South. To think that that kind of a double game could be played without an even-

THE EARTH IS SLIPPING

It is an old assumption of science that the solid masses of the earth are floating islands on a subterranean sea of molten matter. New studies in magnetism claim to confirm the theory, since they suggest that the crust of the earth is slipping around its core and thereby moving the magnetic pole. It is argued that the magnetic pole must be stationary and its movement only apparent, the result of the earth crust sliding over its molten core.

It is taken for granted that solid ground is really solid, though all evidences of geography and geology dispute it. Mountains were made when the earth was restless and are still being made. Sea levels are still changing and great rivers are wearing down the "eternal" hills.

But it is more disturbing to be told that there is no permanent security underfoot. It appears so when volcanoes cut loose and earthquakes shake the solid ground. But some scientists insist that all the outside earth is slipping. It is the way of mankind to yearn for security and stability and to resent change and uncertainty. But this is a changing world. Fortunately for our peace of mind, perhaps, it needs the long view of geological science to realize how much it changes.

MUMBLE JUMBLE

If you have trouble making yourself understood over the telephone, perhaps you are one of those who agree that the American telephone public has the mumbles and that the mumbles are fast degenerating into the grunts. So says a telephone operator, Miss Katherine Schmitt, who speaks from experience, for she got her first job in Manhattan's Nassau Street exchange in 1882 and worked at the board for nearly 50 years in positions of increasing responsibility.

The human voice, she says, is capable of being trained to a high degree, but it does not take extraordinary training to produce clear, understandable telephonic speech. What really is needed is for the speaker simply to give thought to the possibility that he is a mumbler, and to utter the syllables slowly and distinctly, without yelling or without skipping all the consonants. Thus we can do our share in fostering one of the amenities of life.

PROTECTING WILD FLOWERS

It's a fine thing to love beauty, but there is such a thing as loving it too violently. About this time you see people going out from cities into the country, breaking off great heaps of branches from flowering shrubs, and pulling up delicate blooming plants by the roots. They drag home these flowering masses, which wither in a few hours. Meanwhile, the bushes and roadsides that were adorned by this color, become devastated and barren.

Flowering plants that were once the pride and glory of a state, have often been rooted out of all locations near any well traveled road. You have to visit remote spots to find any of these plants, if there are any left. Or the bushes and plants that bear these blooms may be so crippled by frequent raiding that they rarely bloom.

If you intend to quit smoking, do it young. That gives you more years to brag about it.

The measure of a man is the sun of his mind. It is required to make him feel bigger than the law.

"CONTRABAND" by Dennis Wheatley

CHAPTER XIX

Feeling that he had gained ground, and that at least she would not commit herself further for the time being, he mixed some cocktails and asked what she intended to do that evening.

"I do not know—now," she replied slowly.

"Why not wait with me, then?" he suggested. "Let's go gay. We'll forget all this until you've had time to sleep on it."

To his immense relief, she consented, and so it was agreed that she should take a taxi back to the Carlton, while he changed into evening clothes, and that he should pick her up there at eight o'clock. They kissed again and clung to each other as though they were parting for a period of years although they were to meet again in a little over an hour.

It was only when he was in his bath that doubts about the wisdom of his action began to assail him. She had been so quiet and said so little while he had been pressing arguments upon her to cut clear of the mess she was in before it was too late. She had promised nothing, and he really knew little of how deeply she might be implicated in Lord Gavin's plans. What if he had failed to convince her of her danger and she gave him the slip! Knowing now from his own admission that he was working with the police, she would avoid any place where she feared he might find her. It might be weeks or months before he could hope to pick up her trail if she once abandoned the Carlton.

Immediately he reached the hotel his worst forebodings were realized. The bland young man behind the reception counter shook his head. "I'm sorry, sir, Mademoiselle Szentes left here half an hour ago."

"Did she leave an address?"

"No sir, but if you're Mr. Sallust she left a letter for you."

"I am. Let's have it, please." With swift fingers Gregory tore open the blue envelope and read the few lines upon the single sheet:

You work for the police. To confess it, because you hoped to save me, was generous of you, but if you had known me better you would never have done so. How is it possible that I should ever betray the man who has been so good to my mother and myself?

That you should be engaged in the work you are is tragic for me. I liked you so very much, but now we must put our brief hour behind us because it is impossible for us ever to meet as friends again.

Sabine.

For a moment Gregory regarded the note a little stupidly. Then he turned angrily to leave the hotel. To his surprise he found himself staring into Gerry Wells' freckled face. The young Inspector was standing there, clad in a neat dark blue lounge suit, a black soft hat jangling in one hand and a walking stick in the other. He was smiling broadly.

"Well, how's the amateur detective getting on?" he inquired cheerfully.

"He's not," Gregory snapped. "For my sake let's have a drink. I've mucked up the whole darned business." He led the way down the passage to the cocktail bar, where he confessed to Wells what an utter fool he had been.

"I wouldn't worry too much," the Inspector chuckled when Gregory had finished his recital. "I've had a couple of men following her all day, on the road to Quex Park now, as I've just learned from one of the flying squad cars that's sitting on her tail, and as soon as I've had a bite to eat I'm flying down myself. When your man told me on the telephone, ten minutes ago, that you'd changed in a hurry to dash out to dinner, I had a hunch I'd find you here. I thought perhaps you might like to go with me. Maybe you'll see her again this evening."

Gregory and Wells considered it unlikely that the smugglers would undertake any operations much before midnight, but Sabine would do the journey to Quex Park in a couple of hours and so should arrive there by quarter past ten, or a little after. They decided to lose no time following her down into Kent.

They had spent barely a quarter of an hour in reviewing the situation, so Gregory reckoned that even allowing for a return to his flat and a scratch meal on the surplus of the supplies got in for Sabine's tea he could reach Crofton, where Wells' plane was stationed by 9:30, if he was quick changing into more suitable clothes.

Wells was awaiting him, at the time arranged, beside a single-engine, 120 h.p. two-seater Tiger Moth.

"Hello! Open cockpit," said Gregory. "Wish I'd known; I'd have put on warmer clothes."

"You'll be all right," Wells assured him. "It isn't a long trip and there's a rug inside. Here..." he held out a flat, neatly packed bundle with arm straps attached. "Your parachute. It'll help to keep you back warm."

"Parachute! What the hell do I want with a parachute?" Gregory grunted.

"Nothing, I hope, but I'm afraid you've got to wear it if you're coming in my plane. Government regulations."

"Oh well!" Gregory pushed his arms through the loops and fastened the gear about his waist, then climbed into the observer's seat.

The sun had set at a little before nine. It was nearly dark now and the stars were coming out again for what promised to be another almost cloudless August night.

Twenty-five minutes after leaving Crofton they picked out the great mile-wide belt of trees which gave Quex Park such shelter, yet threw it up from the air in the flat surrounding landscape. Wells kept well to the south of it, passing over the little village of Acot, then veered northward towards the sea. After a moment a single beam of light showed in the fields to the east of the park and he came down towards it.

"I wasn't taking any chances this time," he shouted back to Gregory as they bumped to a standstill. "I gave orders for my man to show a light here—where you came down before."

The torch had disappeared but a voice came out of the darkness: "Mr. Wells?"

"Yes, Simmons, what's the latest?"

"Thompson reported twenty minutes ago, sir. There's nothing fresh so he's gone back to watch the house again."

"Good." The Inspector smiled over his shoulder towards Gregory. "We've beaten her to it then, but she ought to be here fairly soon. Simmons will look after the plane while we go inside and give the lady a silent welcome."

Gregory grunted noncommittally

desperately to get in touch with Sabine again, but not when he was in the Inspector's company. Wells had quite enough evidence upon which to arrest her at any moment he chose, and Gregory knew that she was only being left at liberty so long as she might prove useful as a lead to further evidence which would incriminate Lord Gavin. Once the net closed it would be beyond his power to help her.

With Wells beside him he made his way through the pitch-black wooded belt along the east drive to the fringe of the lawn, from where, knowing now the direction of the house, he could distinguish its outline among the surrounding trees less than a hundred yards away.

The hoot of an owl came from some bushes nearby and to Gregory's surprise Wells mimicked the cry in reply. Immediately there was a stirring in the shadows to their left and a figure tiptoed across the gravel path towards them.

"All quiet, Inspector," said the newcomer in a low voice.

"Thanks, Thompson, you'd better stay here while we go round to the back of the house." Keeping in the shadow of the trees they tiptoed down a narrow path through the shrubbery until they came out at the rear of the building. A light was burning in the scullery window where Gregory had attempted to break in the night before.

Wells moved along the wall of the house to the doorway and knocked gently on it. There was no reply. He knocked again, louder this time, and there was a sound of footsteps in the stone-flagged passage. The door swung open and Milly's slender form was revealed on the lighted threshold.

"Hello," she said in pleased surprise. "I didn't expect to see you so soon again."

"Nor I you. I thought you'd be bedded by this time."

"It's not very late, only just ten, although often I go to bed earlier and listen to the wireless."

Gregory, growing impatient at this unimportant conversation, stepped forward out of the shadows and she started back, realizing his presence for the first time. He had seen her the night before but she had not seen him, as she had been walking in her sleep. Wells introduced them.

"Won't you both come in?" she said. Wells shook his head. "We'd better not, in case somebody comes along to this wing of the house. Our presence might take a bit of explaining, as your aunt's not supposed to have visitors. We only knocked to let you know that some of the people we're after will be here again tonight. Nothing unusual's likely to happen, but I thought it would be a bit of a comfort to know we were close handy here, keeping an eye on things."

"That was nice of you," she smiled up at him. "We knew they were coming, though. The foreign lady telephoned only a few minutes ago to say that Aunt was to get her some supper. I was just going out to tell your man about it when you turned up."

"She'll be here pretty soon then. We'll get back to the bushes, I think. Remember me kindly to your Aunt."

"I will, thank you. Goodnight." When the two men turned away she stood at the half-open door reluctantly watching Wells' retreating back as he disappeared beside Gregory round the corner of the house.

BRISTOL HIGH OFFERS TWO MODIFIED COURSES

Arranged for Opening of The 1938-39 Term; Home Economics, Manual Training

WORK IS EXTENDED

With the opening of the 1938-39 school term at Bristol high school, two modified courses of study are to be offered.

The present commercial and academic work is to be extended, manual training work to be included in the program.

The tenth grade girls will obtain additional hours of home economics during the 11th grade and not lose any of the hours of the specialized training offered on the regular schedule.

It is stated the individuals taking the general course will be permitted to obtain the necessary language, mathematics, and science requirements necessary for the majority of schools of higher learning, especially nurses, although the academic course is really the college preparatory course.

The secretarial course of study emphasizes the development of skill in typing and shorthand, with a limited amount of bookkeeping and history, permitting a person to benefit from three years of training in shorthand and typing. This program is planned for the limited number of individuals who have outstanding ability to carry on more elaborate course of study.

In this new commercial course there will be included a course in business economics hours, a course in retailing, or a subject on consumer's education.

The pupils will have the preference of taking either the academic course or a college preparatory program, the secretarial commercial course, the general business course or the general course.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

"Portia on Trial," the latest photoplay from a Faith Baldwin story, opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre for a run of two days.

Republic has done an astute bit of casting in putting Frieda Inescourt in the title role, for that splendid actress has just the proper maturity and emotional depth to give the role the strength and pathos it requires.

Portia is a brilliant and successful woman criminal lawyer, admired and feared by her adversaries. An unfortunate love affair in her early girlhood has provided the driving force to urge her to secure justice for down-trodden womanhood—justice at any cost. The price of this justice, in the gripping climax, is the love of her long-lost son, but she contrives, with superb poise and finesse, to secure both.

The role of Portia is one which should take its place among the film classics, and place Miss Inescourt at the pinnacle of stardom. Her artistry is augmented by players of the calibre of Walter Abel, Neil Hamilton, Heather Angel, Ruth Donnelly and Barbara Pepper.

One dramatic spot in the picture, which is said to be tops for heart appeal, is the scene in which Portia is torn between her desire to be at the bedside of her injured son, and her sense of duty which demands that she go to Albany to plead for the life of a youth doomed to the electric chair.

The original story, from the pen of Faith Baldwin, has been translated to the screen by Director George Nicholls, Jr., under Associate Producer Albert E. Levoy.

RECIPES YOU WILL WANT TO TRY

Creamed Codfish

One pound salt codfish; two tablespoons butter; two tablespoons flour; two cups milk; one tablespoon chopped onion; seasoning; one tablespoon minced parsley; one egg yolk; one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Soak codfish in cold water overnight. Or place in saucepan, cover with cold water and slowly bring to boil. Drain, add fresh cold water and bring to boil again. If codfish is very salty and dry or hard, repeat this process a third time. (Because this parboiling has been neglected, codfish often is considered unpalatable.)

Heat butter and add chopped onion. Cook one minute, then stir in flour. Slowly add milk and season to taste. Add shredded, freshened codfish and simmer about 15 minutes. (This may be done in double boiler.) Beat egg yolk lightly in a little milk, then stir into cream sauce. Add parsley and Worcestershire sauce. Cook five minutes more and serve. Delicious with baked potatoes, toast, or toasted crackers.

Maple Sugar Cookies

Two cups of maple syrup; one cup sweet milk; flour enough to roll (about five cups); one cup of butter (or half butter and half shortening); two teaspoons baking powder; four eggs.

Beat the sugar and butter until well-creamed. Add the well-beaten eggs, milk and finally the flour, in which the baking powder is thoroughly sifted. Roll and cut in any form. Bake in moderate oven.

Fruit Plate

Place a nut cup filled with warm honey in the center of a bread and butter plate. Arrange around this strawberries, either in halves or whole and fresh pineapple slices. Serve with cocktail fork.

Potato Puffs

Two cups mashed potato; two eggs; one-half cup milk; one teaspoon salt; one cup grated cheese.

Add the milk to the potato and beat until thoroughly blended. Add the beaten egg and salt, gradually adding the grated cheese. Bake in buttered tins in a slow oven.

Croydon Man Must Pay $200 Fine and Costs

In pronouncing sentence Judge Boyer remarked:

"It is not often in criminal court that we see people are reimbursed for losses, but this is an unusual case. The flowers had a commercial value. The crime itself was most detestable and outrageous. If there had not been such an offer made by your counsel in this case, the Court would have given you the limit. You are fortunate that an offer of this kind was made."

Judge Boyer made a distinction in pronouncing sentence, two defendants having previous prison records.

Fox and Simmons were each sentenced to pay one-fourth of the costs and serve 6 months to 3 years in the Bucks County Prison.

Geist and Bartsch were each sentenced to pay one-fourth of the costs and serve 3 months to 3 years in the Bucks County Prison.

Charles Repeyneck, Bethlehem, R. D. No. 4, charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods, and Joseph Nagy and James Stayer, charged with robbery, larceny and receiving stolen goods, went on trial before President Judge Keller on Tuesday afternoon. Repeyneck, who is charged with two bills, one of which has three counts, robbery, larceny and receiving stolen goods, has been named on two indictments.

Wendell Goncz, 728 North Main st., Bethlehem, the first witness for the Commonwealth, testified he was drinking with a friend at the Seldersville Hotel, March 19, when he first saw the three defendants.

"My friend and I were there in the hotel about one hour and a half and I had about $376 in my pocket," said Goncz. "I took the entire roll out of my pocket and took off a $5 bill while I was in the hotel. I helped my friend Harry into the car and was getting ready to go home when one of the men asked me to ride along to Bethlehem. They got into the car and we started out. After we had driven three or four miles I said to one of them, 'We are not going toward Bethlehem but toward Philadelphia.' Goncz testified.

Resuming the trial Goncz testified Nagy stopped the car by pulling on the brake; Goncz denied that he was so drunk he didn't know what was going on. "I remember everything. When the car stopped I got out and started to run Nagy put both his hands into my pockets and took the money out of the right hand pocket," said Goncz.

Goncz denied that he lost the roll of money. He said he reported the theft at the police headquarters in Bethlehem. "When we left the hotel Nagy told me to turn to the right instead of the left. After going two or three miles I knew we were not going toward Bethlehem. My friend, Mr. Howelet, was pretty intoxicated and slept through the hold-up. I was about two blocks away from the car when I was held up. Nagy took the money and Repeyneck and Stayer were there.

One of them grabbed me around the neck," said Goncz. Goncz said he had $13.65 in his left-hand pocket which Nagy did not get because he didn't reach far enough into the left-hand pocket.

The hold-up is alleged to have taken place in Springfield township on Route 679 about midnight.

"The first time I felt Nagy's hand going into my pocket was when I was driving the car. I pushed his hand away twice and put my hand over my pocket," said Goncz.

Margaret Nagy, proprietor of the Crossroads Hotel, March 19, the second witness, testified she saw the three defendants and Goncz at her hotel. "Goncz bought drinks for everyone in the hotel and pulled out a $10 bill to pay for them. I told him I couldn't change that and he pulled out a $5 bill which was in a big roll of bills. I told him to keep the roll in his pocket," she testified.

When Mrs. Nagy, no relation to one of the defendants, inadvertently answered a question asked by the Court, President Judge Hiram H. Keller, ordered the withdrawal of a juror and the case is continued. Judge Keller asked Mrs. Nagy whether there was anyone in the barroom whom she was afraid of. "I was afraid of Nagy because he just came out of jail," answered Mr. Nagy instead of replying "yes."

C. William Freed, counsel for the defense, made a motion for the withdrawal of a juror because of the remark which would bias and prejudice the jury.

Judge Keller granted the motion. Joseph Bechold, of South Langhorne, was found guilty of failure to stop at the scene of an accident and failure to render assistance. Judge Boyer placed Bechold on probation on condition that he pay the costs.

The Great Game of Politics

THE convention, disregarding frantic appeals for loyalty to "Our Great President," agreed by a majority of ninety-three, thus raising the question, as the Charleston News and Courier points out, whether the one hundred per cent. New Deal hazydon is really the vehicle upon which the smart politicians want to ride through the State this summer. The situation, the News and Courier says, was best summed up by the delegate who declared, "As I approached this hall today I saw a jackass being led around by a Negro boy. That is symbolic of our party. It is today being led around by the Negroes of the North." While this is a little extreme, nevertheless, to those who have watched the extent to which the New Deal Administration has gone to capture the Negro vote, there is nothing surprising in the action of South Carolina. IT WOULD seem to mean that the delegation from this State in 1940 is not likely to be controlled from the White House, nor deliverable by anyone to a hand-picked New Deal candidate of the extreme type. It would seem that the State represented the Roosevelt-Farley politics to the extent of contemplating what in the past has been unthinkable in South Carolina—to wit, refusal to support the Democratic ticket in 1940—or, at least, to be free not to support it. If the State convention action does not mean this, then it does not mean anything.

NOR, considered in the light of the forthcoming primaries, is it easy to interpret it as favorable to Governor Johnston, proclaimed by himself—as the White House candidate against that gnarled old veteran of the Senate, "Cotton Ed" Smith, whose Senatorial record in the last year has not pleased the little group of left-wing liberals around the President. In answer to the charge that he "deserted" the President, old Senator Smith beats his broad breast and belligerently bellows that "God made me

Carolina Democrats to shake off their shackles; that it was unthinkable they should bind themselves in advance to support the 1940 nominee; that this movement came from Democrats as regular as any; that this rule would compel them to swallow any dose, however nauseous, concocted in the next national convention; that it was time for the South Carolina Democracy to recover its freedom.

THE convention, disregarding frantic appeals for loyalty to "Our Great President," agreed by a majority of ninety-three, thus raising the question, as the Charleston News and Courier points out, whether the one hundred per cent. The scrapping of Rule 32 might reasonably be regarded as evidence that South Carolina prefers to keep this man in the Senate uncouth as he sometimes seems, rather than replace him with a rubber stamp. USE SOAP AND WATER FOR BEST RESULTS IN CLEANING THE RUGS

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)
Spring housecleaning days are here. Curtains, woodwork, and enameled furniture will get their usual cleaning with soap and water. Other furniture will also need cleaning.

Soap and water are safe for cleaning rugs, upholstered furniture, and window shades.

The first step for successful cleaning is to remove as much dirt and dust as possible from rugs and furniture with the vacuum cleaner. Then make a thick lather using a mild soap.

With a soft brush, apply the lukewarm soap solution to the rug or chair. Use a circular motion and do only a small area at a time. Remove as much of the lather as possible with a dry brush or scraper. Wipe the surface with a cloth wrung from warm water.

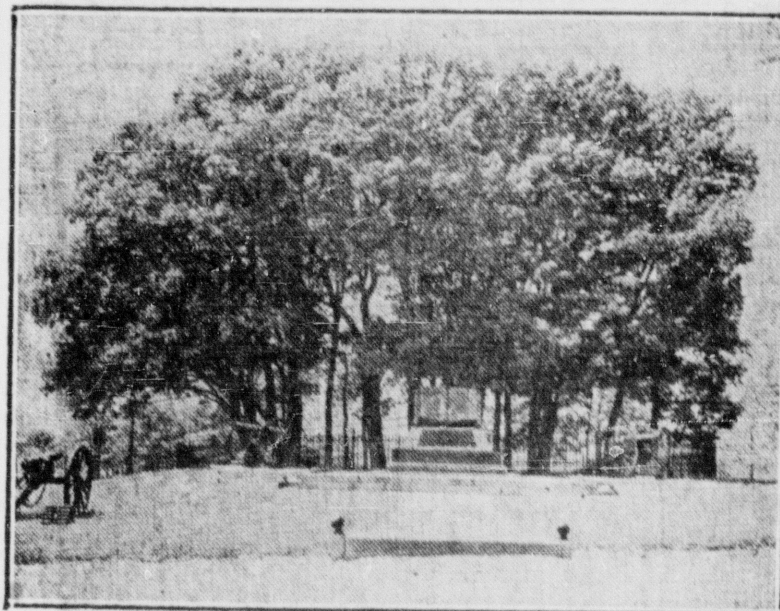

It may be necessary to repeat this step several times to take out all the soiled suds. This is especially true with velvet chairs and rugs with heavy and long pile.

All the soap should be removed to avoid spotting and to keep excess moisture from getting into the chair padding or the backing of the rug. Many rugs have a glue sizing on the back.

Follow this method for the entire surface of the rug or chair and leave to dry in a well-ventilated room. When thoroughly dry, use a stiff brush to bring up the pile or nap.

spread the shade on a smooth surface and scrub both sides with a stiff brush and warm soap suds. Wipe with a cloth wrung from clear water. Ordinary window shades usually can be cleaned by using a cloth wrung from mild soap suds and wiping with a clean cloth. All window shades should be selected by Mr. and Mrs. Carl G.

BOLDEN'S COLORED STARS TO PLAY LANDRETH NINE

Tomorrow evening at 6.15, Landreth's Seeds will cross bats with the strong Bolden's Philadelphia Colored Stars in what is expected to be a very interesting and closely contested ball game.

With the expected return to sensational form of Stewart "Slim" Jones, and the addition of several outstanding players, the current edition of Ed. Bolden's Philadelphia Stars are ranked as one of the favorites in the Negro National League pennant chase.

It was the remarkable hurling performances of Jones, when he first encountered topnotch Negro League competition, that earned the Philly Stars their loop championship. At that time, Slim, product of Baltimore, was only 19 years of age, and from all indications was headed to develop into one of the greatest Colored pitchers that ever ascended a mound.

However, during the past two campaigns Jones could not do much for Ed. Bolden's forces because of a sore arm, with the result of which the Philadelphians had to be satisfied with the contender's position.

Now, with several ranking performers signed to join the leading holdovers of last season, and Jones figured to take his regular turn on the mound with his old time assortment of lightning speed, curves, change of pace and control, indications point to a highly successful campaign for the Boldenites.

Besides Jones, the Stars' hurling department also includes Webster McDonald, known for his uncanny underhand delivery; Rocky Ellis, mighty powerhouse despite his slight stature; Ernest Carter, secured in a trade from the Pittsburgh Crawfords, and Jack Bruton and Jimmy Missouri, both rookies with plenty of promise in developing into ranking Negro stars.

The other new men, secured in either trades or straight sales, and who are expected to aid the Stars' cause considerably with their outstanding ability at fielding and hitting, includes: Bill Perkins, catcher, formerly of the Pittsburgh Crawfords; George Giles, first base, from the New York Black Yankees; Clyde Spearman, right field, secured from the New York Cubans, and Paul Dixon, a hard-hitting outfielder who has seen service with various Negro League clubs.

Adding to these standouts such holdovers as Manager Jud Wilson, Jake Dunn, Roy Parnell, Dewey Crecy, "Pop" Harris and Al Harvey, the Philadelphians' strength both defensively and with the bat can be very easily realized.

This array of talent includes every possible type of player necessary to make a winning combination. And, owner Ed. Bolden, now in his 28th consecutive season as head of a top-notch Negro aggregation, feels confident that his club will be in the thick of the pennant drive from beginning to end.

PAUL RUNYAN—DUE FOR A COMEBACK?

DOING THE OPEN!

GENE—THE VETERAN SARAZEN THINKS THE CHERRY HILLS COURSE SUITS HIS GAME—GENE MAY SURPRISE IN THE COMING YEAR!

LITTLE—LAWSON LITTLE IS A DARK HORSE—HE HAS WRECKED BAD ON THE DENVER LINKS AND KNOWN IT LIKE A BOOK!

In doping out the coming U. S. open golf championship, attention should be paid to some of the less favored contenders who are likely to surprise at Denver.

In this class are the veteran Gene Sarazen, little Paul Runyan and pug-nacious Lawson Little, the former amateur czar.

Sarazen has slipped badly in the last few years, and rarely wins a tourney these days. However, Gene is of the opinion that the layout of the Cherry Hills course is favorable to his type of game, so the stocky shotmaker may surprise next month.

Poison Paul Runyan reached his peak about three years ago when he mopped up on the winter circuit and captured the P. G. A. championship. Of late the little fellow hasn't been going so good, but his marvelous putting touch makes him dangerous at Cherry Hills.

Any golfer who can sink those putts as expertly as Paul is an open contender to be reckoned with.

Our third dark horse candidate is ex-amateur king Lawson Little.

Lawson knows the Denver course like a book, and has wrecked par to smithereens at Cherry Hills in the past. He is confident that he will be at his best over this course, and a confident Little is a hard man to beat on the links.

BRISTOL TRACKSTERS LOSE TO LANSDALE

Yesterday the Bristol high tracksters let the curtain come down on their current cinder season when they put up a valiant but futile effort to stop the strong-going Lansdale tracksters. The locals were swamped by an 84 to 15 score.

Due to final examinations the mainstays of the team, Bliz Wollard and Franny O'Boyle were unable to do their bit for the local colors, however Harrison Fisher and Chet VanAken substituted in excellent fashion to show great prospects for next year.

Danny DiMidio led the scoring honors of the Bunnies with six points. He gathered his usual five counters in the shot put when he tossed the ball 43' 10" from the toe board. Danny also ranked in a third position in the discus.

For Lansdale Jack Watt, captain of the team, was by far the standout attraction of the meet. Jack proved himself a four time winner when he easily galloped to victory in the 100, 220, 440 yard dashes and the broad jump.

Steel Ready To Co-operate

New York, May 26—Steel is ready to co-operate in a sound program for revival of industry. Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation told the American Wire and Steel Institute today. And Ernest T. Weir, chairman of national steel corporation tacked on a criticism of those who with no knowledge of the facts attack the industry.

Weir specially named Robert Jackson, solicitor general of the United States, and the Rev. Carl P. Heffler, of Pittsburgh, a speaker before the National Catholic Social Action conference in Milwaukee.

Girdler suggested a four point program on which steel would willingly co-operate.

1. The development of a sound national fiscal policy.

2. Adoption of a predictable government attitude toward industry.

3. Such government regulation of industry as is in the public interest, but which does not compete with industry or put it in a strait jacket.

4. The laying of a foundation for industrial peace by sound amendments of the Wagner act, making it fair to employees and employers alike.

Weir reported that steel has "inherited a legacy of bad public opinion" and that "hardly a week goes by but what someone prominent enough to be quoted, takes it (steel) to task for causing the current depression, prolonging the depression or in some manner throwing a monkey wrench into the economic machinery of the country."
